SUMMARY

It was a time after the Qing invasion of Joseon. As a regent, Prince Yi Pyeong tried to reform a country, which was chaotic inside and out. However, Prince Ikseong Yi Chang tried to wage war with the Qing once again, killing Crown Prince Yi Pyeong. Yi Chang tried to kill the Crown Princess and her son Yi Seol as well. However, through the sacrifice of the Crown Princess, Yi Seol survived and disappeared without a trace. Ten years later, Yi Chang, who became the King, is reigning with absolute power. However, as the King did not have a proper heir, his position as the head of the country was in jeopardy. There even was a prophecy that the Joseon Dynasty would fall and the Jeong Dynasty would be established. The only thing Yi Chang could do was to find and kill Yi Seol to consolidate his royal power. At that time, there was an intelligence that Crown Prince Yi Seol had surfaced in Hanyang (present day Seoul). It was a credible rumor that he was staying at one of the dozens of inns in Hanyang. Among them there is The House of Flowers, which looks shiny but is full of flaws, and its proprietress, YUN Dan-o, who had nothing but a way with words, and was clumsy but full of power. And staying there are three dandy young men each with their own secrets and a different tale to tell. Kang San, Kim Si-yeol and Jung Yu-ha. Perhaps Crown Prince Yi Seol might be among them?

LOGLINE

Things that are just covered over don't heal naturally. They're sure to simply re-emerge in another form.

SUMMARY

Many things in this world end up simply brushed aside and forgotten. They may be the injuries of victims that have been compelled to move on, or the crimes of powerful groups that have been willfully buried; they may even be examples of the kind of corruption we all know exist, but that we feel powerless to address, all because we fear igniting a firestorm and getting burned.

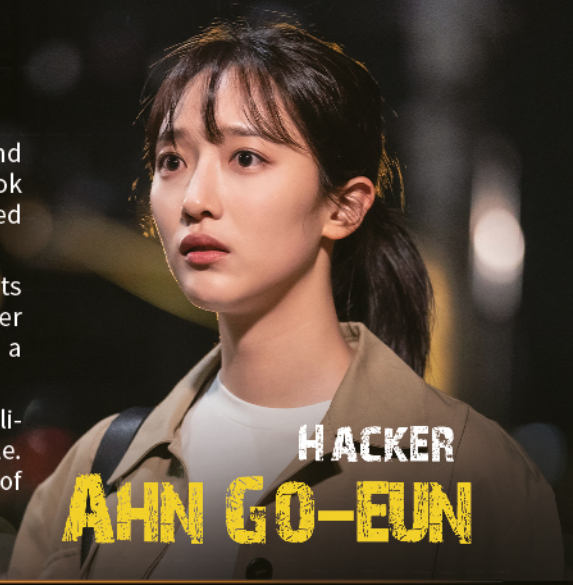

<Taxi Driver 2> aims to reveal the festering wounds left by these simple words -"let's forget it and move on." It explores to reflect on what it is that makes us walk away from the things that have happened to us. And, lastly, it seeks to offer catharsis via the spectacle of the Rainbow Taxi team uncovering and extricating long-buried evils.

STARRING LEE JE-HOON (KIM DO-KI)

Dogi's whistle trauma is representative of this kind of pain. People say justice has been done, but the heart and the mind are unpersuaded. But there are precious people next to Do-ki who let him get out of the deep tunnel inside him -- the Rainbow Transportation family. Thanks to them, Do-ki turns on the taxi meter and starts running again today.
